

Animation Workshops

No prior experience in animation needed.

The storytelling workshop is designed to give students an idea about telling a story through film making in the animation genre. We have been running this popular workshop in schools and colleges across the country for the last six years.

Have a look at our amazing ani-mats for some ideas of models to create.

Visit www.ani-mats.co.uk for more information about the full range.

Animation Workshops

Enjoyed watching Wallace and Gromit? Pingu or even Bob the Builder?

Animation is a fantastic, engaging medium. Today animation makes use of technology as a tool to create engaging films easily. In so many ways, we discover through animation how the computer and technology are there to enable the creative process. Focusing on the filming helps provide a context for storytelling.

We will bring a set of 6 laptops, all loaded with easy to use animation and film editing software, as well as 6 cameras and sets and models to animate. You can use your own if you have created them already.

The Course of a Typical Day

Introduction

We start the day with a short talk about animation and film making to all those involved in the sessions. We cover basic animation and film techniques.

Part 1

Students work in small groups to create a series of animation sequences using your pre-made models or ones we have brought along.

Part 2

Students learn a bit about editing films, adding audio and visual effects, before using these with the clips they have already filmed.

Conclusion

The day usually ends with a screening of the films that have been made during the day.

Post Visit

After the event we send a DVD containing all the work or transfer the files to your network.

If multiple copies of the DVD have been ordered, these may take a bit longer to arrive, depending on quantities.
